This website and its contents are subject to the following terms. By using this website, you agree to these terms and you acknowledge reading them.

The sole purpose of this website is to provide general information about the Competitive Enterprise Institute (“CEI”), its Center for Class Action Fairness (“CCAF”), its work, and its attorneys. This website is not intended for or directed to the residents of any particular jurisdiction.

No solicitation is made upon you that you ought to retain any CEI attorneys. This website is not intended as advertising or solicitation. CEI will not represent anyone based solely upon a visit to this website and without a thorough consultation and evaluation.

No communication through this website—either from you to CEI or from CEI to you—constitutes or creates or is in any way related to an attorney-client relationship. You are not CEI’s client and no CEI attorney is your attorney.

Sending an email to CEI does not create an attorney-client relationship. Your communication to CEI is not privileged or confidential. Please do not send any confidential or sensitive information unless you obtain prior written authorization from CEI to do so.

This website does not contain legal advice. Therefore, you should not treat its contents as legal advice, or as anything except general information about CEI and CCAF.

For legal advice, seek the advice of a private attorney. If you need advice about a legal problem but do not know an attorney, you may wish to check with relatives, friends, neighbors, your employer, or co-workers who may be able to recommend an attorney. Your local bar association may have a lawyer referral service that can be found in the Yellow Pages or on the Internet. Before making your choice of attorney, you should give this matter careful thought. The selection of an attorney is an important decision.

No representation or suggestion is made that the quality of the legal services performed by CEI attorneys is greater than the quality of legal services performed by other attorneys.

Descriptions of CEI’s work are not intended to suggest or represent that CEI attorneys are specialists or experts, or that anybody has certified them as such.

Descriptions of CEI’s work do not indicate future results. Each case is different, and its outcome depends on a variety of factors unique to each case and how the law is applied to its particular factual and legal circumstances.

CEI attorneys are licensed to practice only in those jurisdictions designated in their respective biographies on CEI.org.

CEI may post links on this website to other websites that CEI does not control. If you use any of these links, you will leave CEI's website. CEI does not vouch for the maintenance or content of linked sites.

This website is owned and operated by the Competitive Enterprise Institute.

We designate, to the extent that any jurisdiction requires designation, Sam Kazman as the attorney responsible for this site.
