

How to Apply for the CEI Internship Program

Who Should Apply

College students and recent college graduates who support the principles of limited government, free enterprise, and individual liberty.

Application Materials

Submit your resume, a cover letter, and a brief writing sample as a single PDF attachment to Richard Morrison at interns@cei.org.

Experiences Offered

Interns are assigned to work for a specific CEI expert for the duration of their internship. Some interns participate directly in public policy research on one or more of CEI's many issue areas. Others work in communications, fundraising, or IT. When applying, please indicate if you have a preference. Successful candidates will have strong writing, research, and analytical skills regardless of their area of focus.

Stipend

CEI offers both paid and unpaid internships. Upon being interviewed, exceptional applicants may be offered a stipend. Internships for which a student receives academic credit are always unpaid.

Partnership with Charles Koch Institute

The Competitive Enterprise Institute is proud to be a partner organization for the Charles Koch Institute's professional education programs. Applicants can participate in one of CKI's semester-long internship or fellowship programs while working at CEI. The Charles Koch Institute currently provides a stipend of $450 a week for participants.

Housing

CEI does not provide interns with housing. Prospective interns, however, have several housing options. Washington Intern Student Housing provides year-round accommodations, and Georgetown University, George Washington University, and American University offer summer intern housing.
