

Conservatives Agree:

“Net Neutrality”

Is Bad for the Internet, Stifles Innovation — and Hurts Consumers.

Big government, pro-regulation groups like MoveOn.org want the government to regulate the Internet.

But conservatives understand — “Net Neutrality” means the end of the Internet as we know it.

“Net Neutrality” stifles innovation, hurts consumers — and is the first step toward taxing the Internet.

We’re the Institute for Liberty — and along with other leading conservative, free-market, limited-government groups, we oppose “Network Neutrality” and any other form of regulation or taxation of the Internet.

Don’t you agree?

We’re ready to fight to keep the Internet free.

Conservatives Oppose “Net Neutrality.”

Paid for by the Institute for Liberty.

Learn more at: www.InternetFreedomCoalition.org

The Institute for Liberty • 4094 Majestic Lane #278 • Fairfax, Virginia 22033

These are just some of the leading conservative groups that oppose government regulation of the Internet:

American Conservative Union
Americans for Prosperity
Americans for Tax Reform
BAMPAC
Catholic Citizenship
Center for Individual Freedom
Citizen Outreach
Commonwealth Foundation for Public Policy Alternatives
Competitive Enterprise Institute
Cornerstone Policy Research
Council for Citizens Against Government Waste
Ethan Allen Institute
Free Enterprise Fund
Frontiers of Freedom
Grassroot Institute of Hawaii
Heritage Foundation
Illinois Policy Institute
Independent Women's Forum
Institute for Liberty
Internet Freedom Coalition
Iowa Association of Scholars
Kansas Taxpayers Network
The Maine Heritage Policy Center
The Media Freedom Project
National Taxpayers Union
Ohio Taxpayers Association & OTA Foundation
Public Interest Institute
Reason Foundation
Religious Freedom Action Coalition
TechPolicyWatch.com
Tennessee Center for Policy Research
Traditional Values Coalition